THE URAL MOUNTAINS

Russian nature is incredibly attractive. Due to the country's enormous size, it varies from subtropical belt of Sochi to subarctic weather of Siberia.

One of the places often visited by tourists is the area of Ural Mountains. They lie in the northwest of the country among two plains. The Ural Mountains are also the border between Europe and Asia. They stretch for more than two thousand km, so it is going to be difficult to bypass all of it. The truth is that this rocky system is one of the most scenic in the world. The highest point is Mount Narodnaya.

История

THE ROUTE: FOLLOWING EMPEROR NIKOLAI II

This monarch visited the South Urals twice: first – being cesarevitch in 1891, and second, being the Emperor, – in 1904. Monarchs rarely went to the eastern part of their empire. The Emperor's attention to the region shows the significance of the South Urals for the internal political landscape of the time. Crown Prince's first visit to Orenburg Governorate coincided with a difficult period. The governorate was suffering from the drought, famine was about to come, the population was on the brink of bread riot. Cesarevitch Nikolai was expected to help with compassion. Nikolai's second visit to the region was in 1904, at a time the Russo-Japanese war broke out in the Far East: troops were sent from Russia to Manchuria. During mobilization the Emperor visited military garrisons, bade farewell and blessed the soldiers for feats of arms. This travel of Nikolai II about Russia's East was the last.

WHO IS HE - A ZYURATKUL TOURIST?

In recent decades, there has been an increasing interest in the study of cultural landscapes in connection with regional and cultural identity. Geographers view places not only as environmental spaces but also as subjective “processes,” that are humanly produced and changed, thus representing the evolution and condensation of a complex history of environmental, economic, political, and social processes.

Russia, with its vast size, uneven population distribution, and relatively low population mobility, is extremely heterogeneous. Although Russia has always been a center-periphery structured country, the fragmentation of the periphery intensified in the last two decades since the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991. Although each Russian region is a product of
